

MRS. FISCH'S FUNERAL AT COUNTRY CHURCH

Brief Rites at St. Philip's in the Highlands Follow a Private Service.

VILLAGERS MOURN HER

GARRISON, N. Y., May 28.—The burial of Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish took place shortly after noon today in the churchyard of St. Philip's Church in the Highlands overlooking the Hudson.

The ceremonies were simple. In them Mr. Fish sought to carry out the wish of his wife that she have "a simple country funeral." The throng which is usually an accompaniment of the funeral of a person of Mrs. Fish's position when held at a church in the city was absent. Instead there were only Mrs. Fish's family, intimate friends and neighbors in the carriage and on foot.

The service was a private service earlier in the day at the Fish country house, a mile south of the Garrison station and up on the hills above it. This service was attended by only the family and employees of the estate, of whom there are a large number.

Meanwhile the funeral party of friends was boarding a special train at the Grand Central Station. This train, consisting of five cars, left at 10 o'clock and arrived at Garrison an hour and a half later. At the Garrison station were carriages to take them to the church. Two mounted men of the Aqueduct police, in khaki uniforms, galloped up the hill toward the church by the side of the long line of carriages and, arrived at the church grounds, took up positions on either side of the entrance gate. There were there to prevent any possible traffic congestion, but they had little to do.

St. Philip's in the Highlands dates back to 1771, although the present edifice was built at the time of the civil war. The churchyard, surrounding the building on three sides, contains the graves of many persons prominent in New York history and in the development of the Hudson River valley. The buildings of the Military Academy at West Point are directly across the river, partly screened from view at this time of year by abundant foliage. The church building sits near the edge of the hill and well back from the road.

Service Very Brief.

As soon as those who came on the special train had entered the church, the bell was tolled and the hearse bearing Mrs. Fish's body appeared over a rise of ground, followed by automobiles carrying the family party which had attended the earlier service at the house.

In keeping with the simplicity of the service there were no honorary pallbearers. The boy choir of the church gathered at the door and walked ahead of the casket as it was carried to the altar. A blanket of red roses and lilies of the valley covered the casket and all the space about the altar was banked with flowers, wreaths and garlands. The last part of the service, known in the social and business circles of New York.

The Rev. Dr. Walter Thompson, who had been in charge of the service, conducted the service. He read the last verse of the Psalms, "Lead, kindly light," and then the boy choir sang the funeral chant. The other music was furnished by the choir and congregation, of "Lead, kindly light" and "Onward, Christian Soldiers." Dr. Thompson and the Rev. Dr. Chorley shared in the reading of the Episcopal funeral service. There was no sermon.

The boy choir and the clergymen left the church and went to the grave, not a stone's throw from the church door. There the brief interment service was read, followed by a prayer. After a half hour of quiet reflection, the pastor pronounced the benediction there was a slight pause, and Mr. Fish, taking several roses from one of the flower droppers, placed them in the casket. Those who had come from New York turned away and walked back to the church, where the carriages were waiting to take them to the station. The casket had been carried into the church at 5 minutes before 12 o'clock. At 12:30 the service was over. The train left the Garrison station for the return to New York at 1 o'clock. Luncheon was served on the train.

The family group about the grave with Mr. Fish comprised Mr. and Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish, Jr., Sidney Webster Fish, also a son of Mrs. Fish; Mr. and Mrs. Albert Z. Green, the latter a daughter of Mrs. Fish; Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton Fish, brother and sister-in-law of Stuyvesant Fish; the Misses Janet and Helena Fish and Hamilton Fish, Jr., daughters and son of Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton Fish; Mrs. William S. Caldwell, sister of Mrs. Fish; Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Benjamin, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Francis, Miss Harriet Rogers, Mrs. William B. Rogers, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Burdette Potter, Miss Helen Kean, Judith Kean, Mr. and Mrs. John C. Cooper, Mr. and Mrs. John Clinton Gray, Mr. and Mrs. Austin Gray, John Clinton Gray, Jr., and Henry G. Gray.

Came From New York.

Among those who came from New York on the special train were Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Fish, Mr. and Mrs. John Jacob Astor, Mrs. Frank S. Withers, Mrs. J. Russell Soley, Mrs. Burke Rose, Mr. and Mrs. Pembroke Jones, Albert Eugene Gallatin, Mrs. Pauline Fiedler, George Peabody Rust, Clarence W. Dolan, Major G. Creighton Webb, Charles A. Munn, Howard Taylor, Albert R. Conkling, Frank Follick, Edward N. Teller, Mrs. Teller Smith, Miss Evelyn Burden, Mr. and Mrs. George J. Gould, Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, Mrs. Herman C. Harlan, Mr. and Mrs. Madison Gray, Mrs. Harry T. Peters, Miss Leta Robinson, Miss Maria de Bar, Mrs. Francis L. V. Hoppin, Harry S. Bark, Mr. J. Cooper Hewitt, Mr. Henry S. Belmont, Mr. Charles de Looney, Robert B. Van Cortlandt, the Rev. Mr. Sarah and Eleanor Cooper Hewitt, Mr. and Mrs. William Lawrence, Miss Mary H. Wilcox, Lawrence L. Gillespie, Mr. and Mrs. Karrik Ruge, Mrs. C. C. Cuyler, Moncure Robinson, Mr. Oliver Harlan, Mr. and Mrs. Whitehouse, John L. Bacon, Mr. and Mrs. James L. Bacon, Mr. and Mrs. Alexander, Mr. and Mrs. William J. Jones, Mr. and Mrs. Ormond G. Smith, Mrs. Taylor Campbell, Miss Josephine Osborn, Mr. and Mrs. Orme Wilson, Mrs. William Lamber, Charles M. Robinson and Frederick H. Baldwin.

Entirely aside from the loss to her family and friends, Mrs. Fish's death was taken as a personal loss by the poorer population of Garrison, most of whom are employed on one or another of the large estates which make up the community. Many of these find work on the Fish estate, and these especially mourn the loss of a benefactress whom they loved for her democratic ways as much as for her kindness. It was recalled yesterday that Mrs. Fish accompanied her husband to the post office by the Hudson river train, and on Monday, walking the mile and a quarter down the hill from her home, Glencliff, in a heavy rain, Mr. Fish carrying an umbrella as he only protection from the weather. They stopped and passed the time of day with numerous acquaintances—these included every one in the neighborhood—and walked back home. Mrs. Fish died suddenly on Tuesday night of hemorrhage of the brain.

Mrs. Fish had been a member of St. Philip's in the Highlands since her marriage to Stuyvesant Fish in 1876. Mr. Fish is a vestryman and his father was a warden of the church.

MRS. KNOBLAUCH LOSES SUIT.

Health Board Order on Muzzled Dogs Upheld by Court.

The legality of the Health Department's dog muzzling order was upheld yesterday by the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court when the court sustained the order of Magistrate Freschi remanding Mrs. Charles Knoblauch, wife of the banker, for trial in Special Sessions because she took her Pekinese spaniel Kuruki out on the street unmuzzled.

Mrs. Knoblauch appealed on the ground that the health board had no power to make such a sweeping order, but under the decision of the higher court she must stand trial for a misdemeanor.

BARNARD GIRLS GIVE PLAY.

"Earth Delites" Acted in the Evening on the Campus.

Graceful dancing and tasteful costumes, with the natural green background of the campus as a stage setting, made the play given by the Barnard girls last evening one of the best ever presented at the college. The play was "Earth Delites," by Miles Carman and Mary Perry King.

The leading part was acted by Miss Ray R. Levi, who for four years has been one of the stars of the college stage. It tells of a wandering student who supplicates the old gods and goddesses of the earth to return to their naughts, and they do so, leaving behind them gladness in the hearts of mortals. Miss Levi took the part of the student.

Others in the cast were the Misses Joseph Harper, Mary Coates, Lorna Bauman, Freda Kirovsky, Mary Gray, Dorothy Earle, Sarah Butler, Elizabeth Palmer, Helen Blumenthal and Helen Lechmann.
